He spoke in a galet tone and looked ant of the wincow. It went over to him and placed my hard on his she not, and "coked down in his char blue eyes." "Hat, you know nous of Hayar than you ever told me. You know that Hager is living, and I feel that the is beneath this right-that we have not and conversed—in short that Higg r and Miss fanden are eas!" "He turned to me with a careless livelh. "Upon my word, hid, I did not know you would care to make about our little Hager. I begin to think that she is the cause of making you odd—bringing these gray hairs before their time. You are not the gay follow you once were; and I wish you could find little Hager."

The turned many, and his last words were uttered low, as if to himself rather than to me.
